

This product is a Merrill Lynch research comment published to inform institutional investors of current developments in the Internet / e-Commerce Industry. It is in the traditional research note format, which RIXML defines as a 'Comment', and implies it is a shorter, time-sensitive publication, as opposed to a more detailed report-type publication.

The Source tag indicates the publisher and authors of the document, giving the relevant contact details of each. The Content tag contains the high-level content as defined in RIXML, as well as details relating to the type and location of the resource (file) that contains the actual publication. It indicates that the publication is a 2-page PDF document that can be found on the Merrill Lynch institutional client website. The Context tag provides most of the applicable filtering and searching information. Finally, the Legal tag provides the required disclosure, disclaimer and copyright information.

The product is focused on the Internet / e-Commerce and Media industries, and thus the ProductFocus tag is set to 'SectorIndustry'. Both the Merrill Lynch-defined and RIXML-defined sector and industry classifications are provided, and the focusLevel attribute within the SectorIndustry tags indicates that the product is specifically focused on the industry level. This implies it is focused on the RIXML-defined 'Media' and "Internet & Catalog Retail" industries, which Merrill Lynch defines as the 'Cable TV' and "Internet / e-Commerce" industries.

The Issuer and Security tags for the two companies mentioned in the publication are included in this RIXML document, but an identifier and a Publisher Recommendation are the only data items provided for each company / security. Two company-focused notes were published at the same time as this industry note, and these products would contain the more detailed company data. The relationships between these company notes and this industry note are indicated using the RelatedProduct tags.
